Q: Can we use the same DataReader over and over on different rows/records I am using a DataReader in C# and I have a procedure in the DB that is returning a row. I have a lot of records to process and the reader is slow. I am not sure if I can use the reader on more than one record at the same time. I am using the following code to fetch the reader in C#: myCommand.CommandType = CommandType.StoredProcedure; SqlParameter parameters = new SqlParameter("@id", txtId.Text); SqlDataReader myReader = command.ExecuteReader(); while (myReader.Read()) { // process some code here that retrieves data from another procedure } I am wondering if what I have here is ok. I can handle it by using the while loop, and then read in the next row before I use the previous one. However, I would like to know if I can use the DataReader for each row, then I just need to call command.ExecuteReader() and it will read each row in the order that was specified. I am not sure if it is safe to do this, as I am processing these rows. My hope is that I can use the reader until I have processed all the records that are returned by the reader, then just keep the next one and use it. A: The reader will close itself (the instance that you created) when you go out of its life scope. In your case: the execution of ExecuteReader(). Try calling using using before the reading. using (SqlDataReader myReader = command.ExecuteReader()) { while (myReader.Read()) { // process some code here that retrieves data from another procedure } } In most of the time it will be enough. If this is not, then I would recommend to keep a list of open readers. public static List OpenReaders {get; set;} .. using (SqlDataReader myReader = command.ExecuteReader()) { if (!OpenReaders.Contains(myReader)) {
