The main goal of Adobe Photoshop is to create high quality images and videos. The result is often outstanding. However, it is not necessarily the easiest editor to use. Photoshop Elements does not have the same level of functionality and there are parts of the interface that are not easy to use. Some of the features that are only available in the professional version are not available in Elements. The basic interface is very similar to Adobe Illustrator CC. Elements is more intuitive than Photoshop and easier to learn. However, if you are an experienced editor, you can use Photoshop or even Photoshop Elements. The basic workflow in Photoshop is very similar to that of Elements. You can crop, sharpen, blur, resize, add text, and edit the pictures. However, Photoshop contains better tools for editing the colors and the different visual aspects of the pictures. The 2019 update to Photoshop released in July provides a number of new features such as HDR, tonemapping, tone-mapping, form masking, eye blending, lens distortion, vignette removal, vector editing, and image merging. Q: Swift 2.0 UIImageView release / setAspectRatioFilled? In Swift, is there an equivalent to UIImageView's release / setAspectRatioFilled (a.k.a. imageView.clipsToBounds = true)? In Objective-C, it's done like this (imageView is a UIImageView, of course): // Clips to bounds imageView.clipsToBounds = YES; // Fills aspect ratio imageView.aspectRatioFilled = YES; I'm trying to create a function that changes the imageView's image, but something like: func changeImageView(image: UIImage, imageView: UIImageView) { imageView.clipsToBounds = NO; imageView.image = image imageView.clipsToBounds = YES; imageView.aspectRatioFilled = NO; } won't work for some reason. A non-workable alternative is: func changeImageView(image: UIImage, imageView: UIImageView) { imageView.image = image imageView.clipsToBounds = NO; imageView.clipsToBounds = YES; imageView.aspectRatioFilled = NO; } but that'll change the imageView's image to the default image (like an "no zoom" image), even though I set the aspctRatioFilled to NO, which I thought would fix that. I understand the basics of how the UIImageView works, but I can't figure out why setting that property doesn't seem to work for me. Is there an equivalent

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a zoom lens, and in particular, to a zoom lens having a large zooming ratio, and suitably used as a zoom lens to be provided in a camera for still pictures, particularly of a high degree of resolution. 2. Description of the Related Art Recently, for a zoom lens, it has been demanded to make high a magnification and to reduce a size. It has been known that, to expand an angle of view, a refracting power of a first lens unit is relatively weak and a refracting power of a second lens unit having a large numerical aperture is relatively strong. However, it has been not sufficient to increase a refracting power of each lens unit in order to expand an angle of view. As a zoom lens, as one of means for expanding an angle of view, there is known a zoom lens in which an image is formed in an intermediate image position within a first lens unit, and focusing is conducted from a rear surface of the first lens unit (for example, refer to Japanese Patent Publication No. SHO 57-44290). That is, it is known that, as a zoom lens, a first lens unit and a second lens unit move, so that an angle of view of the zoom lens can be expanded, and focusing is conducted from the rear surface of the first lens unit. Further, there is known a zoom lens, in which a central beam passes through a spherical surface, the beam is refracted at a light source side surface and a diaphragm side surface of the first lens unit, thus making an image formation, and the beam is focused onto an image surface side (for example, refer to Japanese Patent Publication No. HEI 8-234167). That is, it is known that, in order to expand an angle of view, and at the same time, achieve a reduction in size, a first lens unit and a second lens unit move, so that an angle of view of the zoom lens can be expanded, and focusing is conducted from the rear surface of the first lens unit. Also, as a zoom lens to be provided in a video camera, a zoom lens to be attached at a position nearer to the object than the front focal plane, and a miniaturized and high magnifying zoom lens are known (for example, refer to Japanese Patent Laid-Open Publication Nos. HEI 8-195792, 2001-107290 and
