Subscribe on iTunes: Twitter: Facebook: Instagram: Mobile Gaming Ramifications Mobile Gaming Ramifications Mobile games and the gaming industry have been on an upward trend for some time, with a positive response from both consumers and content developers. But how will mobile gaming evolve and change in the future? In this podcast, CTO Andrew Britton talks about his views on the market, and how companies can exploit and monetize on this growth. Recent trends show the mobile gaming market is growing rapidly. Smartphones and tablets are becoming more valuable to the average consumer, and more importantly, mobile games are increasingly being recognized as assets and are a main attraction for the entire industry. Mobile gaming is no longer a derivative market, but a major growth area within itself. Even in 2011, mobile games accounted for over 70 percent of all game revenue worldwide. And since then the market has been on an upward trend with the games industry hitting an estimated $27.5 billion market in 2014. We can expect the trend to continue in 2016 with the estimated worldwide mobile game revenue to be $32.7 billion. So what does this mean for the gaming industry and the global economy? In this podcast, CTO Andrew Britton tells us about what it is like to run the world’s largest dedicated game server cluster, in what is one of the most exciting markets to develop a game for today.

Is there a limit on the number of monsters?

Not limited.

How is each change permanent?

For everything about your character, permanently. However, if the character's name or attribute changes, whatever effect depending on the name is lost. Under no circumstances, the monster's level, summon time or damage will change, even if the monster level changes.

Why is there a minimum level for races?

Each race has its own individual abilities, and hence it cannot be raced at a low level. Therefore, it is necessary to have a 'rank' in order for you to be able to race the race.

How can I complete the quests?

The quests in the game can be divided into 2 depending on data. The quests that can be completed in ONE BATTLE can be completed once the search has been closed, and then be executed at the battle. (After
