tiles and places it on the board. The second player then takes this card and does something with it. Cards can be: broken, rotated, slotted, matched, switched, displaced, shifted, or thrown. Dice can also be used to make special effects. Not only is Indian Summer the fourth game in the Indian Summer series of games from Uwe Rosenberg, it is also the fourth game in our puzzle series. Homepage: Facebook: Twitter: Mutant Games: Family Family Family 6 games in one box The games in the Mutant Games Family collection are variations of Classic Games, a box of puzzles from Uwe Rosenberg that is sold separately. These puzzles are tile-based and build upon the idea of Classic Games by turning tile building into a game. A single tile has its own properties, which vary depending on which colour it is and on the colour on one of its edges. One player takes some number of tiles and places them in their own board. Then the second player comes and tries to match them and remove them. This is where the game begins, and the more powerful match-ups mean the winner of the game is the first player to remove all of the tiles of their own colour. Idea for a short story - long time reader here! Well, the current novel I'm working on is almost finished. I know it's still a lot of work to edit and polish, but I have confidence in it. It was really hard to write, and I had to delete the first 45K words a couple of times. It's a psychological thriller, set in the 1970s, and the main character is a teenage boy. I've had a lot of ideas come to my mind, and I wanted to know if any of you could help me with this! I think this would actually make a good short story, but I want to make sure before I write one. I'd be very grateful if you could give it a read, and if any of you have any idea for what type of story I should write, that would be super awesome. Sometimes I'm really good at this kind of story. :) Summer Story He stole back to the beach. To make contact with the sand, to study the heat, to feel the restraint of his skin. He hoped to see something in her betrayal that he didn't expect. His anger was strangely reassuring, and the knowledge of its source thrilled him like a present of some kind. He heard her coming before she heard him. The first footfall, scarcely audible, meant nothing. But he was ready for her. And he took not even a step back when the gap between them closed to a mere palm-width, and he could catch the scent of her. "I'm really sorry." She was keeping up the pretense that she had just discovered him, and that they had no prior history, but she sounded truly surprised. Shock. He looked away from her - into the water, and to the ocean beyond her naked form. Far on the horizon he could just make out the smudge of the half moon, the colour black bleeding white. Moonlight had never gone in this direction. "What have you done?" "You could have said something." "You should have... oh, this is mine." She reached down and brought up a beach towel. "Give it back." "It belongs to the beach. I just had to clean off my sandals." Adam took the towel. He did not so much as glance at his feet, or show any surprise, just brought the towel back to the two of them. "You're American?" he asked. "Holly Springs, North
