kapil was also critical of the indian cricket board for its lacklustre role in promoting indian sports. the board sees it as a business and a professional sport. its just a business. im not saying that cricket shouldnt be a business. so everytime a cricketer gets in the news, it makes every business person happy. we arent a celebrity-driven society. i think the board has to understand that a sport like cricket is not a business. its not very easy to create a new sport. you have to make sacrifices to do this. with the current political climate in india, kapil is concerned that this could be the final nail in the coffin for the future of indian cricket. the indian cricket board wants to play odis against pakistan and yet india is uninterested in giving pakistani players security clearance for india. if we were to take the tour, we would have to put in a lot of hard work to hold the nation's interest. we have to adapt to new technology, new challenges, and new people. you cannot be afraid of a country. you have to look at the bigger picture. there are challenges ahead but we must not be too apprehensive. another problem for indian cricket is the dearth of new talent. the indian cricket board is hellbent on reviving the glory of sachin tendulkar. its really unfortunate that so much importance has been given to him to the detriment of other sports and to the lack of a healthy and rich sports culture in india. it is like our wine. you keep putting it in the same bottle. when the wine gets old, no one knows how to drink it properly. when you are not able to drink your wine properly, you call it wine and say it has gone bad. for that reason you stop drinking it. if you try to save the wine, you lose the wine. with sachin tendulkar, people are trying to change the glass. if you do not change the glass, you will lose the wine. so all the new talent from india are playing overseas and they are gaining experience abroad. we must make sure that the system brings back the best talent, especially the youth. we dont have a culture where people are taking up sports. kapil agrees.
